

I drive 110 miles to work in Denver, every day. XM is the only way to get consistent news. I have been hoping to get metro Denver weather and traffic one of these days over the XM. This information is not available anyother way as I travel through rural Colorado. I also travel around the country a lot, knowing weather and traffic for the metro area where I am going significantly helps planning my day's activities. I am not surprised by what I find. In these days of necessary travel over large distances, it is imparitive that braod areas' information is easily accessed. XM and the web are the only mechanisms available, and XM is the only resource while traveling. Please do not limit the accessibility to information, through XM in this case, simply because of local media fearing the loss of their shared monopoly.
